Building Better Work: Flexible Working in Practice

Speaker: Nikki Slowey – Thursday 29 October

Flexible working is no longer a new idea – but are we making the most of it? This session explores how organisations can move beyond simply offering flexible working to unlocking its potential for both people and the organisation. In this session we'll look at what flexible working really means in practice, how expectations are changing and the opportunities it creates for recruitment, retention, performance, and employee experience. Nikki will be joined by leaders from Ardenglen, Clyde Valley and Clydesdale Housing Associations to explore what flexible working looks like for them, what they have learned and the difference it is making to their people and organisations.

About the Speaker: Nikki Slowey

Nikki is Co-Founder and Director of Flexibility Works and one of Scotland's leading experts on flexible working. For the past twelve years, she has supported employers to create more flexible, inclusive workplaces. A regular media commentator and public speaker, she has also contributed to research, policy and publications on flexible working.
